THE

5th ANNUAL

AMERICAN TEACHER AWARDS

LIVE FROM WASHINGTON, D.C.

A LETTER TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

WE WORSHIP ATHLETES, we idolize film and television stars, we raise rock stars and other performers to heights of celebrity. And yet in the past four years I've met a group of true American heroes whose impact on our society will prove far more enduring. They're America's teachers, the men and women who daily dedicate their professional lives to educating our young people. You've also met these unsung heroes on The Disney Channel.

So it's with considerable pride that I tell you that November 16 brings the world premiere of our fifth annual salute to American educators. Presented live this year from the historic Warner Theatre in Washington, D.C., The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards brings together a glittering roster of stars from the entertainment world to pay tribute to 36 stars from the world of education. (A special word of thanks to Campbell Soup Company, which this year joins The Walt Disney Company in presenting The American Teacher Awards.) In the course of the program, you'll also get a glimpse of these extraordinary individuals in their classrooms. And lest you think I exaggerate in calling teachers heroes, let me remind you of Leta Andrews and Pann Baltz, who shared the honor of "Outstanding Teacher of 1993." The energy, dedication, and skills they bring to their tasks should serve as inspiration to us all, in every walk of life. You can read more about the two in "Families," beginning on page 14.

As we approach the 21st century, we are in the midst of an information revolution. Yet, as we adopt new technologies we should remember that in this information age we need individuals who possess age-old skills: people who can read and write; people who possess a grounding in the arts and in the sciences; people who are familiar with the geography of our planet and who understand the diversity of its cultures.

In fact, that description brings to mind an artist you'll also meet on The Disney Channel. Peter Gabriel has not only written some of the most intriguing songs of today, but he has also pushed the envelope of creativity and technology, especially with his CD-ROM project Explora 1. On October 2, Sunday Night Showcase presents Peter Gabriel's Secret World. It's a multimedia concert special like nothing you have ever seen before. And that's no exaggeration.

Finally, our new fall lineup begins Monday, October 3. Among the highlights are "Disney Drive-In," a Saturday matinee of classic Disney programs, and the world television premiere of Much Ado About Nothing. Enjoy.

Sunday Night Showcase ROGER DALTREY SINGS TOWNSHEND

This past February, when Roger Daltrey, the former lead singer of the Who, turned 50, he threw himself quite a party. Daltrey had Carnegie Hall host the festivities and gave himself over to a concert that showcased the songwriting genius of Pete Townshend. That performance led to a national tour and an album that was released this past summer. In January, Sunday Night Showcase proudly presents an evening of classic rock and roll with The Disney Channel premiere of Roger Daltrey: The Music of the Who. Joining Mr. Daltrey are guests Eddie Vedder of Pearl Jam and his old bandmates John Entwistle and Pete Townshend himself. "I never get tired of singing Who songs," Daltrey says. "I really think I sing them better than ever." And at 50, Mr. Daltrey retains all the magnetism that made him an icon for his generation.

Disney Night Time ANTHONY HOPKINS IS STILL GOING

He's been dubbed a knight, hailed as the finest living actor in the English-speaking world, and annointed as the heir to Sir Laurence Olivier's crown.

But such renown sits very lightly on Sir Anthony Hopkins, particularly when he discusses his film roles. Of Howards End, the Academy Award-winning Merchant-Ivory adaptation of E.M. Forster, airing on The Disney Channel this winter, Hopkins recalls, "I was asked if I wanted to be in Howards End for Merchant-Ivory and I said 'Yes.' Just like that. Well, they make good films don't they? The acting's always rather good." When Hopkins met James Ivory and Ismail Merchant, "They thought I'd read the script. I said that I had but I hadn't." Hopkins explains, "What I always do is read the first 10 pages or so. That gives you an idea. And I look at the last page—see if my character is still going."

THE JEWEL IN THE CROWN OF DISNEY

BACK IN 1934, WHEN WALT DISNEY WAS STRUGGLING to make ends meet by producing short cartoons used to fill out movie theater programs, he had a dream. Walt had noticed that audiences in Europe would sit entranced through a dozen cartoons in a row. If they would do that, he reckoned, then a full-length, full-color, animated feature film would really wow them. So, selecting a fairy tale that had intrigued him since childhood, Walt began production on Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. While his critics thought he was crazy, Walt encouraged his staff to focus their efforts on making an animated film better than anything that had come before. The staff might have had misgivings as the costs rose, but Walt was confident. Intriguing characters were created, new techniques were invented, a melodic score and tuneful songs were composed, vibrant colors were mixed, and all these elements were combined by the Disney staff into an 83-minute production that premiered at the Carthay Circle Theater in Hollywood on December 21, 1937. A new page in cinema history was written as the film quickly became the highest grossing motion picture of all time—until it was surpassed a few years later by Gone with the Wind. Now, for the first time, The Walt Disney Company is releasing its crown jewel on video. Look for Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs in stores on October 28.

Coming This Fall THE WALT DISNEY GALLERY

Mickey Mouse. Cinderella Castle. Belle and the Beast.

Some of the most creative visions ever brought to life have come from the artists of The Walt Disney Company. Their work, in turn, has become some of the most sought after images in the art world. This fall, The Disney Store, Inc., unveils The Walt Disney Gallery, an all-new retail-and-show experience that showcases these special works.

At The Walt Disney Gallery, guests can take their favorite images home with them as limited-edition pieces, gifts and apparel, home accessories or Disney art souvenirs. At prices as low as $5—and ranging up to $5,000—The Gallery offers a complete range of gifts and collectibles—even animation cels.

There are four themed areas: Animation art is featured in the Animation Gallery. The Contemporary Gallery features modern interpretations of classic Disney characters. The Gallery Shop and a Vintage Disney area complete the Gallery, which includes a special “Inside Disney” exhibit that changes four times a year.

The first Walt Disney Gallery opens this fall at the MainPlace Santa Ana mall, just south of Disneyland Park in Southern California.

The American Teacher Awards TWO OUTSTANDING TEACHERS

Pann Baltz and Leta Andrews say being selected as "The Outstanding Teachers of 1993" at last November's American Teacher Awards was an unforgettable and awe-inspiring experience. (The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards premieres on The Disney Channel on November 16 at 7:00 p.m., Eastern/Pacific time. This year's program is presented in partnership with Campbell Soup Company.)

Baltz, a fourth grade teacher at Camino Grove Elementary School in Arcadia, California, has faced overwhelming odds in continuing her career after suffering a series of strokes and undergoing open heart surgery. After recovering, Baltz taught despite enormous physical challenges—yet she discovered that her teaching skills and love of the profession served to put those physical challenges in perspective.

"When I get a new class of kids, I view every child who comes through the door as a special person," Baltz says. "I try to help them develop their own abilities. I even encourage them to risk failure in attempting to achieve their very best."

Baltz used her $25,000 gift to establish the Pann Baltz Mission Possible Scholarship. The scholarship sends two students and two teachers to Space Camp every year. "The fact that I almost lost the ability to do what I love makes me appreciate the award all the more," she says.

Andrews, a physical education teacher and coach at Granbury High School in Granbury, Texas, says winning the teaching award was "one of the highest of highlights that ever crossed my career." She especially enjoyed meeting the other teacher honorees and being able to bring pride to her town. With her award Andrews established a college fund for her grandchildren.

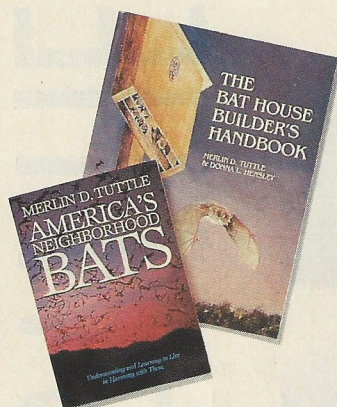

Andrews' enthusiasm for her work is almost palpable. "I cannot wait for the sun to come up so I can go work with those young people every day."

And despite the fact that the field of education has faced daunting challenges in the last few years, Andrews is optimistic about the future. "I think we're going to soon see a solid commitment to education," she predicts, "coupled with a wide respect for others and a love of our country."

Together HAPPY HALLOWEEN AT HOME

Halloween is a terrific time to gather friends and family for a sensational scary but safe and sane celebration. The activities can be scaled to fit the age range of the guests—from pumpkin painting for the younger set to bobbing for apples and fortune telling for older children, and even semi-competitive pumpkin carving for teenagers and adults.

Carol Pflug, spokesperson for Pumpkin Masters, Inc., in Denver, Colorado, recalls the pumpkin party tradition that Paul Bardeen, the firm's founder, began 50 years ago. Bardeen held annual B.Y.O.P. (bring your own pumpkin) bashes, providing all the tools, patterns, and refreshments necessary to get everyone creating innovative designs. After the carving session, the kids would take their pumpkins door-to-door, showing off to the neighbors as part of their trick-or-treat tradition.

"It's a multi-generational activity and everybody has so much fun," says Pflug, who has been staging such parties for several years. Pflug recommends making a big to-do over the just-carved pumpkins, lingering with the lights out as each pumpkin is lit and appreciated. Hosts can photograph the guests with their pumpkins, Pflug adds, and even use the shots to decorate next year's B.Y.O.P. party invitations.

No matter what the party entails, the atmosphere is especially important at Halloween, says Tex Ann Kraft, a marketing administrator for Hallmark Cards, Inc., in Kansas City. In the front yard, hosts can display pumpkin flags or windsocks, place luminarias (paper bags in which a short candle shines through decorative cut-outs) along the front walk, and hang spider webs around the front door. The house itself should be kept dark, perhaps with a scary sounds tape—widely available in party stores—playing in the background.

Activities can fit the interests of the guests. For older, elementary-age children, a parent dressed up as a fortune teller can run a crystal ball booth, offering individualized predictions. Younger children can use rubber stamps and stickers to decorate their trick-or-treating bags, or they can listen by the fire to a scary Halloween story. And of course, everyone should come in costume.

The party food can be fun, adds Kraft. Cut out the cheese for burgers in the shape of pumpkin faces or hang donuts by strings and have the young guests reach for the food with their hands tied behind their backs. Have the younger kids decorate their own cupcakes.

Food doesn't have to be definitely Halloween; sometimes the serving container itself can add the festive touch. For example Kraft suggests calling a seasonal stew

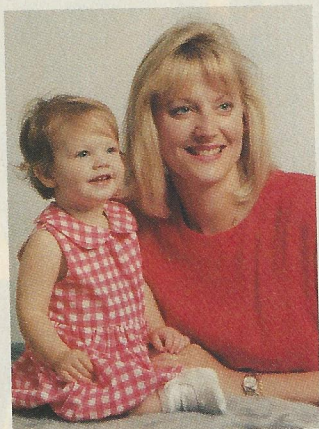

"witches brew" and serving it from a cauldron-like container.

"The trick to a successful Halloween party is to enjoy doing what seems fun and creative, and not get frightened away by the need to create the perfect event," says Kraft. "A little decorating, a fun activity or two, some refreshments—and everyone will have a great time."

ENTERTAINMENT SOFTWARE

YOU DON'T NEED CD-ROM to enjoy fun and exciting software. There are scores of games available that are highly interactive and include action and sound—such as Be Our Guest, a memory and skill game for children ages seven and up, and Follow the Reader, a talking computer adventure that builds reading skills, for ages five to eight. Both from Walt Disney Computer Software, Inc.

Challenges THE MULTIMEDIA COMPUTER PRIMER

IT'S A COMBINATION of media that promise to change everything from the way people learn to how they are entertained—even to how they track family finances. The ROM system costs about $1,500. CD-ROM disks, which look like the iridescent 4 1/2-inch music CDs, store about 400 times the data found on an ordinary floppy disk.

"Multimedia really is a new breakthrough because it allows the computer to engage practically all the senses," says Roy graphics to provide out-of-this-world action.

Older kids and adults can use software to take what amounts to the equivalent of an adult study course. You can explore Mozart's music with "Multimedia Mozart," hunt for baseball statistics—or watching video clips of the great moments in the game—with "Complete Baseball," or tour London's National Gallery with "Art Gallery," all by Microsoft.

"It may sound trite, but pictures really are worth a thousand words, and CD-ROM provides a whole new way to learn," says Charlotte Guyman, general manager of lifestyle products at software giant Microsoft, in Redmond, Washington. Guyman describes what the new technology can do in this way: "Imagine looking up 'cat' in the encyclopedia. On CD-ROM, you can first read that a cat will land on its feet and then watch it happen in slow motion or even speed it up. Suddenly, there's a whole new meaning to information."

CD-ROM systems also allow families to pursue questions quickly, perhaps jumping from cats to lions to Africa—with each topic amplified by video and sound. "Less time is spent looking up things, and more time goes into learning and experimenting," Guyman says.

Smith concedes that the CD-ROM revolution won't change the fact that people will always appreciate the simple pleasure of curling up on the couch with a good book. But he does predict that entertainment and information technology will converge into one incredible, all-purpose box by the end of the century. "The future in multimedia technology is so bright I need sunglasses."

"The future of multimedia technology is so bright I need sunglasses," says Roy Smith, a multimedia products manufacturer.

rapidly evolving revolution in multimedia merges full-motion video and stereo-quality sound with all the power of the interactive personal computer.

With home computing the fastest-growing niche in the computer industry, many families are now deciding to buy multimedia systems or to upgrade older PCs for CD-ROM (compact disk—read only memory) capability.

Almost 6 million personal computers were bought last year, and the multimedia hardware market alone increased 34%, according to the Market Intelligence Research Corporation. Now prices are lower than ever before. A computer with the average 4-megabyte RAM (random-access memory) and 170-MB hard disk with CD-

Smith urges parents to choose a computer with CD-ROM capability because it offers the widest range of options. CD-ROM software allows children to hear words spoken on the screen as they point to them, listen to musical instruments being played, watch images of dinosaurs roaming the great plains, land in foreign countries to hear the local music and language, and study action-filled science experiments as they are described. Winter Fun CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING FOR FAMILIES

Are you looking for a great winter sport that the whole family can enjoy?

Cross-country skiing is well-suited to families, says John Moynier, chairman of the Professional Ski Instructors of America and author of Basic Essentials of Cross-Country Skiing (ICS Books, Inc., 1990).

"It's so much easier than downhill skiing and much more social than snowmobiling," Moynier says. "Cross-country skiing doesn't demand a lot of coordination or athletic ability, the risk of injury is minimal, and it is not expensive."

Cross-country skiing is a sport very young children can enjoy, Moynier adds. From age three, children quickly learn to manage skis and poles—although stamina and attention span may limit the time younger children want to ski.

To get started, Moynier suggests families select a cross-country ski area that provides rental equipment at the site and offers some form of basic lessons. Gear—boots, bindings, skis, and poles—typically costs about $10 a day per adult and $5 a day for children.

The gear is user-friendly, with simple step-in systems and no right or left skis. The movement in cross-country skiing is similar to walking, with one hand going forward as the opposite foot steps out. Moynier suggests that families dress in warm layers, with gloves, hats, muffs, sunglasses.

Most ski areas have large, flat spaces particularly suited to the novice cross-country skier. Some areas provide groomed trails that are especially easy to start on, but may come with a trail pass price tag of $16 per person per day. For a first trip, the best bet is to plan an outing of just a few hours and then gradually increase the time with each subsequent excursion.

Moynier recommends that parents wear fanny packs with water, high-energy snacks, sandwiches, and fruit. Often there are warming huts along the trails that make a perfect spot for a quick picnic lunch.

The pleasures of cross-country go beyond the exercise. "There's nothing like that big blanket of untouched snow," says Moynier. "I love to get out there and fantasize that I'm a pioneer, the first person ever to cross this particular meadow."

Kids in the Kitchen

CARAMEL APPLES

Kids love making and eating these terrific, made-for-Fall treats, and with a whole apple in each serving, they're even nutritious!

- 6 medium apples
- 6 wooden popsicle sticks
- 6 tablespoons granola, chopped peanuts or chopped candy-coated chocolate candies
- 1 package (14 ounces) vanilla caramels
- 3 teaspoons water
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup creamy peanut butter
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon ground cinnamon

1. Wash 6 medium apples; poke a wooden stick in the stem end of each apple.
2. Using 1 tablespoon of granola for each mound, make 6 mounds about 3 inches apart on waxed paper, using a combination of granola, peanuts or chopped candy-coated chocolate candies, as desired.
3. Heat vanilla caramels, water, peanut butter and cinnamon in saucepan over low heat for about 20 minutes or until caramels are melted and mixture is smooth.
4. Remove from heat. Dip each apple in the hot caramel mixture and spoon mixture over the apple until it is completely coated.
5. Hold the apple right side up by the stick for a second, then place it stick side up on one of the mounds of granola. Turn the apple so all the granola sticks to it.
6. Refrigerate about 1 hour or until the caramel coating is firm.

Holidays HOLIDAY WISH LISTS

EVEN SANTA ASKS FOR wish lists...but sometimes those long litanies of wants seem to detract from the joy of the holidays.

Some parents wonder if asking their children to write down what they want turns gift-giving into a mail-order experience instead of a fun opportunity to delight one another. And even spouses sometimes sense they would rather gently hint—or just hope—than receive a gift they had to clearly request.

Should we dispense with all the wish lists? Jane Conoley, psychologist and associate dean at Teachers College at the University of Nebraska, thinks lists have their place, as long as parents are careful about communicating a few key issues.

Parents who receive a long, long list of gift requests should avoid becoming angry at the child's many desires and should commend the child for having so many interests, says Conoley. "But parents also need to communicate that nobody ever gets all they ask for and that presents are token expressions of love."

Conoley thinks children should be asked to assemble their wishes in some priority, assessing for themselves just how important each item really is. Parents can encourage their kids to mix requests for outings and favors along with the purchased items on their gift lists—like a trip to the park or a favorite dessert—to promote more personal gifts.

Barbara Cadow, a University of Southern California psychologist, suggests that families turn the list-making into a fun activity, perhaps using unusual parchment paper, or spending special time by the fire to think about and write down those wishes. Cadow is considering limiting her children to just three or four wish requests this year, so Santa can be allowed some creativity in seeking fun surprises. Cadow is also careful to remind her children that they are lucky just to be able to write a Christmas list.

Between spouses, gift-giving is a way of showing the other person that you care about her or him. "Lists take away from the need to be involved," says Conoley, "and come from the desire to give something that is perfect. It's as if this is a test, rather than a show of regard."

Cadow suggests that either way—armed with a list or not—parents should find a special time alone to exchange gifts. "By focusing on the experience of offering each other special presents," Cadow says, "the meaning of the holidays will be heightened."

Much Ado About Branagh

KENNETH BRANAGH HAS BECOME A LEGEND WITH HIS LUSTY ADAPTATIONS OF SHAKESPEARE. BUT AS HE TURNS 34, THE ACTOR ADMITS HE'S A DRIVEN MAN WHO IS ALWAYS GUARDING AGAINST FAILURE.

BY AMY BOOTHE GREEN

WEEKS BEFORE HIS U.S. FILM debut, the news of his arrival was being trumpeted by the heralds of the press. Then, on horseback, Kenneth Branagh as Henry V charged across the silver screen, wearing a gold crown and waving a broadsword. American audiences were immediately won over by the youthful actor with the unruly hair. Branagh hadn't just portrayed Shakespeare's boy king; he had embodied him. And in the long tradition of Laurence Olivier, Richard Burton, and Anthony Hopkins, the newcomer had laid seige to the American screen and conquered it.

Kenneth Branagh's work as a director, actor, and adapter of Shakespeare garnered the sort of furious acclaim that hadn't been seen in Hollywood for more than 50 years—not, in fact, since Orson Welles had launched his career with Citizen Kane. From Henry V to Much Ado About Nothing, Branagh has lured audiences to theatres with lusty, unpretentious versions of Shakespeare that offered not "culture" but a ripping good time. (Branagh's Frankenstein—with Robert De Niro as the monster—comes to theaters this fall.)

"I want to do things for a mass audience," Branagh says. "I'm anti- these barriers of high and low culture. I tend not to underestimate an audience."

"Em's and my relationship is much more than a surface attraction," Branagh says of wife Emma Thompson. "I find it a totally, utterly mysterious and wonderful thing. I can barely talk about it coherently."

Branagh's rejection of elitism explains his popularity. "My values are influenced by a completely working class background," he says. "I'm somebody who believes in popular culture."

At 33, Branagh is a legend. He was the youngest actor in the history of the Royal Shakespeare Company to play Henry V. At 26 he left the troupe to found his own company. At 28 Branagh published his memoirs. A year later, he took the plunge as a first time film director and garnered two Academy Award nominations—Best Actor and Best Director—for Henry V.

Branagh admits that he's driven, that he's possessed by a mad sense of perpetual guilt combined with a deep-seated pride in working hard and striving for his best. "I think all this frenetic activity and always moving on to something is a larger thing about guarding yourself against failure."

That sense of guarding against failure perhaps stems from his background: Kenneth Branagh spent his early years in a working-class Belfast neighborhood that stood in the shadow of Gallagher's Tobacco Factory. Branagh recalls his mother scouring the streets for cigarette butts for his father during hard times. Then, in 1968, Ulster erupted in sectarian violence.

"My parents didn't want to leave Ulster," Branagh recalls, "but my father's work was taking him away, and we experienced a lot of violence."

The family moved to Reading, England—where Branagh faced bullies who mocked his Irish brogue. As a result he soon played his first part—speaking with an Irish accent at home and with an English accent at school. "I was tortured by losing an identity, losing an accent. My saving grace was being good at games."

Through sports Branagh vented his frustrations. But he found himself skipping rugby to attend London plays. Then came what he calls his "gift of certainty."

Suddenly, Branagh says, "I had the sense of being connected to some kind of tradition. I wanted to be a part of that. I could identify with the spirit of the actor."

Branagh auditioned for the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, where every year 1,600 applicants vie for 23 places. Branagh gained entry—and a reputation as a workaholic who was also a walking encyclopedia of theatre lore. He graduated from the Academy with highest honors and launched a career as a working stage actor, branching out into film and television.

Branagh had been a member of the Royal Shakespeare Company for just two years when he decided to strike out on his own, creating with fellow actor David Parfitt

Shakespeare's Battle of the Sexes

Despite the success of his adaptation of Henry V, Kenneth Branagh says that launching Much Ado About Nothing was not without its challenges.

"I was met with the blank faces of studio types not interested in a 400-year-old comedy by a dead writer who was unavailable for rewrites," Branagh quips.

But Branagh cut, transposed, and reshaped Shakespeare's text, making scenes more believable and tightening the pace of the drama. As with Henry V, Branagh directed and starred—playing opposite his wife, Oscar winner Emma Thompson. Their verbal duels as "Benedict" and "Beatrice" form the centerpiece of Shakespeare's play.

Indeed Branagh chose Much Ado About Nothing—which had never been filmed—for its timeless theme: the war between the sexes.

"It's the most wonderful story," Emma Thompson says, "entirely contemporary from the point of view of these themes, which are love and hate and the sexes and everything that makes us human, I think."

Much Ado About Nothing was shot on location in Tuscany, at the 14th-century Villa Vignamaggio, where legend has it that Leonardo da Vinci painted his masterpiece the Mona Lisa. "I wanted to come to Italy for the sensual quality of the place," Kenneth Branagh explains. "Life is reduced to a primitive passion."

The film reflects Branagh's genius and vision—particularly in his casting of British and American actors. Among the film's stars are Denzel Washington, Keanu Reeves, and Michael Keaton as the lunatic Constable Dogberry, who rides around on an imaginary horse—a hilarious bit of stage business invented by Keaton.

"I've always admired American film acting for its—whatever you like to call it—this sort of emotional recklessness, emotional fearlessness," Branagh says. "That's how I think you should approach Shakespeare, with that sort of passionate, full-blooded acting."

the Renaissance Theatre Company. The company soon basked in critical praise for its brave and unpretentious productions.

And thus, at 28, was Branagh approached by a publisher who offered the actor a $75,000 advance for his autobiography. Branagh agreed. More than a few eyebrows were raised in Great Britain, where Branagh-bashing has become a favorite sport among the press.

"In England," Branagh acknowledges, "the appropriate thing is to remain anonymous until you're about 50."

IT WAS WHILE WORKING on the miniseries Fortunes of War that he met his future wife. Unlike Branagh, Emma Thompson came from a background of privilege that included a Cambridge education. The two clicked, and while filming Henry V together they fell in love. They married in 1989.

"Em's and my relationship is and has always been much more than a surface attraction," Branagh says. "It always felt like something strangely more...something. I find it a totally, utterly mysterious and wonderful thing. I can barely talk about it coherently."

Emma Thompson describes their relationship as one of friendship and humor, work and thought. "You have to find somebody you can sink into, as into a comfortable armchair."

Since their meeting, the couple have worked together not only on Henry V and Much Ado About Nothing, but also on Dead Again and the comedy Peter's Friends.

Despite the roles Branagh has played, and the stories he's directed for stage and screen, it's Shakespeare that he keeps returning to. "There are lines that echo for me," Branagh explains. "I remember the first time I saw Lear—'When we are born, we cry that we are come to this great stage of fools...'

"For me, in moments of depression and melancholy, lines like that answer for it and make me laugh. Shakespeare is like some of the Buddhists. After man struggles in this world, the Buddhists say, 'Be cheerful.' Shakespeare makes me laugh—he also stops me from going crazy."

Secrets of the Virtual World

multidimensional

Peter Gabriel

isn't just a

he's an “experience designer.”

BY MR. BONZAI

Peter Gabriel is leading the procession into a brave new world, creating multimedia experiences that explore the thresholds of technology. Yet Gabriel's virtual experiences are also designed to give us a fresh understanding of the very real world surrounding us.

“I think we are fairly flexible as a species,” Gabriel says, “but we don't get to realize most of what we are capable of.” Tapping into the human potential and celebrating the human spirit—and surprising ourselves—lie at the heart of Peter Gabriel's art.

The Disney Channel premiere of Peter Gabriel's Secret World provides a striking introduction to the many levels of Gabriel's multimedia expression. A powerful concert featuring musicians from around the globe, the show employs 53 crew members and a 120-foot stage weighing 26 tons. The props include a gigantic plaster head of Gabriel and a spring-loaded, life-sized tree.

Peter Gabriel's Secret World begins with our hero imprisoned in a red British telephone box, singing out “Come Talk to Me.” He emerges as the band rises from below the stage while huge clouds of steam punctuate the hit song that Gabriel describes as “hot and wet.” Giant video screens add images of racing locomotives and provide exotic counterpoint to “Blood of Eden,” “Kiss That Frog,” “Shaking the Tree,” and other fiery hits.

Peter Gabriel began his stage explorations in the late '60s as a founder of the rock group Genesis, which featured Phil Collins. After eight years of recording innovative albums and hitting the road with highly theatrical tours, Gabriel launched his solo career. He struck gold with hits “Shock the Monkey” (1982) and “Sledgehammer” (1986); his signature videos seized the imagination of the MTV generation.

In short Peter Gabriel is a new with his CD-ROM entitled Xplora-1.

Featuring songs from his recent album US, the CD-ROM format allows Gabriel to present over 100 minutes of video, 30 minutes of audio, more than a book's worth of text, and over 100 still images. “For a number of years I've wanted to become an experience designer rather than just a musician,” Gabriel explains.

Navigating through the many levels of this CD with pictures is a little like channel surfing—but within a thematic realm. It also resembles reading a book: you can skip ahead, go back, reread a memorable passage, tailor the experience to your needs, whims, tastes. Pause too long and Gabriel appears onscreen with such suggestions as "C'mon, get on with it—we haven't got all day."

And you explore a new world. One path leads to a screen filled with album covers from Gabriel's Real World record company. Click the mouse on one cover and you hear a song from the mountains of Asia; click on another cover and you hear music from African villages and other exotic locales. Another path leads to Gabriel's Real World recording studios in England, where you can see a song being performed in rehearsal or even re-mix a hit—you can be the recording engineer. If you'd like to visit Gabriel's WOMAD festival (The World of Music, Art and Dance), you can view performances and learn directly from multicultural sources.

It's an intuitive journey, a new type of video game with personal enrichment as the prize. You not only get all the pop goodies that made Gabriel an international star, but you get music and pictures from diverse cultures around the world.

"I feel very fortunate in that I can work with so many different types of musicians," Gabriel confides. "I feel a lot freer in my own work as I've gotten more confidence and an understanding of what I'm trying to do in developing a style. It means being able to work well with other people."

There is no lack of ego in Gabriel's exploration of his multiple identities, and no lack of generosity for other artists. "There is a responsibility for any artist who takes from other cultures to help promote the artists and the music that they are in turn inspired by." Music lies at the heart of Gabriel's visions, and while he embraces the world, he utilizes technology like no rock star before.

"I have a philosophy about these sorts of things," Gabriel says. "I think there are two ways in which we function as musicians. One is what I call 'Energy A,' which is analytical. For that the computer is wonderful. It allows you to pinpoint a small section of a piece, any sound, and have a very high level of control over it. However it produces a different type of music than 'Energy Z,' which is what happens when musicians see a red light go on and they know they must live in the spot. It's what happens during improvisation."

This concept relates to the interactive experience, where you, the voyager, can play leisurely, cruising at your own speed and stopping where you like, studying the images and letting them sink in. Gabriel is welcoming you to both deconstruct and rebuild the very experience he has designed.

"If you can really get out the stuff you're feeling and thinking—whatever communication device you use, music, art, dance, written word—then it does improve your ability to communicate and therefore, perhaps, to grow."

Rather than an information superhighway, Gabriel likens the situation to an information ocean. Instead of zooming down an Infobahn, you might think instead of compasses, favorable currents, age-old skills leading to the discovery of your own secret world.

It's hard enough to get a squirming kid to sit still for several minutes. Much less with a thermometer in the mouth, under the arm, or in the worst-of-all-possible places.

But that's all changed now. With the Thermoscan Instant Thermometer.

It takes an accurate, easy-to-read temperature at the ear—in only one second. With virtually no worries about injury or spreading germs.

(No wonder ear thermometers are used to take millions of temperatures each year—in doctors' offices and hospitals.)

So, for a thermometer your family will be happy with for years, call us and find out where to get one. 1-800-EAR-TEMP. ext. 31.

At 4½ she's reading 3rd grade books

a child prodigy? not at all! your child, too can be reading one, two or three years beyond present age level... even if a "poor" reader now

Prove it to yourself . . . with this 10 day free trial!

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) home-learning kit fascinating eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading — with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden—often spectacular—improvement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startlingly effective method.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

I am tremendously pleased. My 5-year old is reading very well and I plan to begin with my 4-year old. I am so glad I invested in this set. Judy J. Gay, Stow, Oh.

Last year I taught grades 1-4. I had a 6-year old boy who came to 1st grade reading 6th-grade words. His father had taught him at home using your set. The father donated the set to our school. I was thrilled because some of the children need a lot of extra help with reading and phonics.

Janet Griffin, Triangle School, Apex, N.C.

What a happy Grandma I am! Since I ordered a Phonics set and had it mailed to my granddaughter, Kim, and her 6-year old sister, they are both making A's in school. Mrs. Clarence Sparks, Clearwater, Fl.

Your company has the best teaching method I have found. Thank you for offering such quality educational materials.
